Reading/Writing

I have been busy conferencing with each individual student to review reading strengths and set new reading goals. I try to conference with students between 2-4 times a month.

We also met with our new reading groups this week to start new novel studies. As the students finish their book and mini-project we will have a Book Talk. A Book Talk is an opportunity for a group to share out to the class about the book, telling the class their favorite parts and whether or not they'd recommend it.

Math

Starting next week I am excited to bring back math groups. The students are divided into 3 groups and they visit 3 different stations. They see me for a lesson, they see a parent to guide them through their math boxes or class work and they independently play math games, work on their math challenge or complete tasks from their math menu.

Math groups give me a chance to teach the lesson to your child's ability.

Thank you Math Volunteers!

CORE

What do you remember about?

- Martin Luther King, Jr.
- Susan B. Anthony
- Mary McLeod Bethune
- Eleanor Roosevelt
- Rosa Parks
- Jackie Robinson
- Cesar Chavez

Last week we started learning about the impact those individuals had on our nation in our Civil Rights unit.

As the class learns about each individual they will be recording what the person believed, what they did and how things are different today.
